

MISSION

Each wedding is viewed as a unique and special project. My goal as a photographer is to capture the moments that make your wedding day special, no matter how big or small your wedding is. It is my desire to capture the beauty and detail, as well as the fun and emotion that goes into the day, from getting dressed, to pre-wedding jitters, to laughing at the reception.

STYLE

There are two basic types of wedding photography: photojournalistic and traditional. In the traditional style, most of the pictures are poses and group shots, whereas the photojournalistic approach uses mostly candid shots, while trying to tell a story. I tend to use a combination of the two styles, with more of an emphasis on candid. However, the day belongs to you, and I will first consult you on the style you prefer, so that your moments will last a lifetime.

SPECIALTY

With a background in graphic design, I have the skills available to create custom prints beyond what a camera can do by itself. Some popular specialty prints include: sepia tone prints, black and white prints, black and white bride with only the bouquet in color, bride and groom with only the bride in color, bridesmaids in only the dresses in color, etc... Also, it may be possible in some photos to remove the backgrounds or objects, fix blemishes, open shut eyes, etc...

PHOTOGRAPHER

I realize all the decisions for your wedding are "big decisions," but perhaps the most important one of all is choosing your photographer. You want someone who realizes that the day belongs to you, who will make you feel comfortable and respected, who enjoys meeting new people, who will make the process fun and exciting for all those involved, and someone who will involve you in the picture taking process. All the things you get with Redenbaugh Photography.

I graduated from Indiana University's Kelley School of Business, with a business degree in Computer Information Systems, along with an ambition to start my own business. After pursuing photography as a hobby for years, in 2004 I decided to put all my creative energy into doing professionally what I have always loved as a hobby.

I believe my enthusiasm for photography, warm personality, fun style and attitude, along with my background in graphic design, give me the tools needed to create the best memories of your day.

So with a passion to capture the perfect image, and a desire to be the best, Redenbaugh Photography is sure to make your special memories last a lifetime.
